

FOR 125 YEARS, CSHL RESEARCH AND education programs have been central to the advancement of biology and genetics. Our Long Island campuses, now spread over nearly 200 acres, have been centers for the global exchange of scientific knowledge. Throughout the decades, the Laboratory has prized its stewardship of life science, with great appreciation for the public and private funds that have propelled us forward.

CSHL supporters are dedicated to seeing the results of research benefit mankind. 2015 was a year replete with examples of how basic scientific research benefits society. In April, CSHL entered into a strategic affiliation with one of the nation's largest health systems, Northwell Health—a unique relationship that will invest more than $120 million in cancer research and bring the Laboratory's science more rapidly toward the clinic. The new partnership underscores the significance of biomedical research to healthcare today.

The importance of CSHL can also be felt in the economy. An economic impact study found that the institution, directly employing 1,100, indirectly accounts for over 500 additional jobs, and annually brings more than $140 million in revenue to Long Island from federal grants, private philanthropy, an array of scientific educational programs, and commercialization of technologies. The entire study can be found in the About Us section of www.cshl.edu.

Private philanthropy drives a great deal of the most innovative basic research. The Laboratory is grateful to all donors, who allow our science to push beyond the mainstream. In 2015 we celebrated the 10th Double Helix Medals Dinner, raising $4.5 million and honoring Katie Couric, Anne Wojcicki and David Botstein. Thanks to the leadership of our Board of Trustees, this spectacular event put CSHL research in the New York City spotlight. In November, George D. Yancopoulos, M.D., Ph.D., President of Regeneron Laboratories, joined the institution's governing body, bringing his unique perspective as a scientist, clinician, and industry leader. A special thank you to trustees and other benefactors for generous gifts to research programs: Lalit and Kavita Bahl, Jenny and Jeff Kelter, Mary W. Harriman Foundation, Gladys and Roland Harriman Foundation, and Leslie and Stu Weisbrod. Jim and Liz Watson continued their legacy as philanthropic champions of the Laboratory with a major gift toward educational programs.

To celebrate its 125th anniversary, CSHL opened its campus in June to non-scientists—our friends in the community. Faculty, students and employees were out in full force to tour, explain, and share their knowledge with nearly 600 visitors. This event helped inaugurate Nicholls Biondi Hall, built with a gift from CSHL Chairman Jamie C. Nicholls and O. Francis Biondi to host scientific poster sessions for the Meetings & Courses Program.

Throughout the year, we welcomed more than 2000 visitors for tours and public lectures about CSHL research and education developments. We engaged virtual visitors in multimedia experiences about CSHL's past, present and future at www.cshl.edu/125. A special 125th Anniversary series of public lectures featured luminaries in science and society: Dr. Sylvia Earle, National Geographic Explorer in Residence; Peter Neufeld, the Innocence Project; Dr. Michael Wigler, CSHL; Dr. David Tuveson, CSHL and the Lustgarten Foundation; and Dr. Jeremy Farrar, the Wellcome Trust.
